Large Storm Predicted To Travel to Michigan

Earlier this week a storm has been ragging across Canada and is seen to be moving in the direction to the upper peninsula of Michigan. The storm that is moving towards Michigan is a catagory 2 with an average of 98 mph winds and there are weather warning all around the state as well. Everyone is suggested to stay inside if the storm reaches. The storm is expected to last for the next several days, but from its origin point it has been slowing down in wind speed. It is possible the storm will not be as destructive when it is predicted to arrive due to the slowing in wind speed. For more information Click here
